NANAIMO ELECTION.

The election in this flourishing constituency is presumed will commence on Monday next—at least the nomination is not likely to come off sooner. Originally there was but one vote in this district, and that was believed to be cast by proxy. It was easy in those days to return a member, for whoever got that vote was sure of no opposition. The candidate who had the honor of being elected by a constituency of one was Mr. Kennedy, J. G. Barstow, and Capt. Swanson. Of these three only the first named ever took his seat. The others declined the honor. Next came A. R. Green, Esq., who was elected without a contest, and served out only a part of his term. Mr. D. B. King next took the field as an independent Reformer, and was elected to serve out Mr. Green's term. For awhile Mr. King did very well indeed, but for some reason or other his zeal for the popular cause cooled off considerably. Whether it was the prospect of an Acting Attorney Generalship, a Chief Justice-ship, or some more substantial allotment, we are not prepared to say; but he cooled down entirely when the public required his services, more particularly in reference to the Hudson Bay Company's claim to the town site, when he might have done good service to the country. But if Mr. King is guilty of sins of omission and commission to the country and his constituents, he did to his duty in opposing the repeal of the Grand Jury and the reduction of the number in Petty Juries. He was however fresh in the harness then. There have been many things since that he might have rectified or tried to do so; but having let them pass without notice, we regret to say that we cannot in justice to the public say that he was all a member ought to be. He is a gentlemanly man, a fair lawyer, but of no practical weight in the Assembly. The chief advantage of having him in the House would be his legal knowledge. He offers himself again. We do not say elect him; nor reject him, except a better man can be found. If a better can be had, by all means take the best man.

Mr. C. A. Bayley is also in the field. He is well-known, both here and at Nanaimo. He is untainted politically. His sympathies are liberal and progressive, and if elected he would vote right. From all we can learn he will pull a fair vote in Nanaimo, and in all probability give Mr. King a very close contest.

The next candidate to represent Nanaimo is Mr. J. Begg, of Balmoral, Salt Spring Island. We are informed that his chances of election in Nanaimo are not very promising.

We have heard it intimated, but we do not vouch for the truth of the rumor, that Mr. Charles W. Wallace, of the large mercantile firm of Dickson, Campbell & Co. of this city, is likely to offer himself to the electors of Nanaimo as a candidate. He is a gentleman who is well qualified to represent the interests of Nanaimo, as there is no one better acquainted with them. If he should come forward and be returned, we believe the electors would have no cause to regret their choice. Nanaimo is a port of too much commercial importance to entrust its representation to any one but a practical business man.

THE PRUSSIAN AND THEIR KING.

Our last telegraphic news makes the "leading journal" speak despondingly as to the chances of a continuance of peace in Europe. The unsettled and uneasy feeling which preceded the Crimean war has again taken possession of the public mind of the leading writers of the old continent. The American question, which has so long agitated them, has been succeeded by one scarcely less important, because more immediately felt. Poland has become the sore spot of Europe. The physicians are trying to cure it. Will this cure be effected without resorting to a war? If a war arises, who will be engaged, and how will it result? All these questions are agitating men's minds in the Old World. In the midst of all this diplomatic turmoil, however, a new source of disquietude arises, or, to speak more correctly, an old one culminated. Prussia now divides with Poland and America the attention of the great powers which are so often engaged in regulating the European map. The present troubles in that kingdom are not new. They have been going on for some time. They would have been perhaps finished for good or evil long ago if this had occurred in another country—in France for example. The Prussians are however a patient people. They have submitted to injustice at the hands of their king, hoping, no doubt, that he would see the error of his ways and comport himself towards his people as a constitutional monarch should do. But in vain. We need not wonder therefore should we hear them exclaim before long that further submission would be criminal, and that the history of Charles I. of England can be repeated in Prussia. Things have gone so far that one need not be surprised at any day to hear of an outbreak.

The King last fall dismissed the House of Deputies without their having voted the Budget. That, however, did not incommode the monarch in the least. He collected the taxes and expended them at his own risk, trusting to being indemnified by the next Chamber of Deputies. That body, however, instead of being selected as he thought they would be, from among those who would be disposed to gloss over his unconstitutional acts, were of the very contrary stamp. From the moment of their assembling at the beginning of this year, they did not fail to show that they at least were not the men to barter the liberties of those whom they represented. They refused to acquiesce in the act of the monarch and his ministers levying the budget without the authority of the popular House. They asked for the dismissal of the men who had advised the king to throw aside the Constitution. This was refused. Not only this, but no steps were left untried to bring the Lower House into contempt. The ministers would answer only what they chose, and disclaimed all responsibility to the country for their action. Foreign alliances were entered into likely to lead the country into war. Prussia was by compact with Russia, made the policeman of the latter, to arrest the fugitive Poles and deliver them to the tender mercies of their oppressors. Even this arrangement was not known to the Prussian people or their representatives until the Prussian minister, Von Bismarck, told them plainly that his master would make war when he pleased, and without their consent. Every attempt, in fact was made by the Ministry to show the Chamber that they were mere puppets—that the whole power was in the hands of the King, and that he was determined to use it. This was certainly playing a very dangerous game, but the worst was yet to come. During a debate in the Chamber of Deputies about the middle of May last, the Minister of War interrupted the speech of one of the members and was called to order by the President, who answers to our Speaker. The minister refused to listen to him, insisting upon the right of the Ministry to speak whenever they pleased, without being subject to the decision of the chair. To this unwarrantable and unprecedented course of conduct, the President, after in vain endeavoring to make himself heard, replied by leaving the chair. The Ministry then resolved not to go near the House again until amendments were made, and the right they claimed was recognized. The King sent a message to the Deputies, expressing his determination to abide by the Ministry. The House replied by setting forth the whole of their grievances, the unconstitutional conduct of the Minister, and the absolute necessity for a change both of men and system. The King's reply to this says that the House by their address had taken away all community of action; that they had by their debates on foreign questions paralyzed the action of the Government; and that the King will maintain the power of the Crown undiminished, and will not allow the foundation upon which it rests to be removed. And the same afternoon the House was dissolved, the government reserving to itself the determination of the manner in which the unsettled financial measures of the country shall be brought to a conclusion. Thus matters now stand. The King has over-ruled the Constitution. He is in some measure sustained by the nobility. He has a powerful army commanded by the nobility; but he has all the rest of the country against him, and not only that, but every other constitutional country in Europe. It would not take much to fan the present agitation into a revolution, which would drive the present despot from the throne which he has forfeited by his tyranny and stupidity.

NANAIMO.

GENTLEMEN.—FROM THE COMMUNICATIONS of mutual confidence which have passed between us whilst I had a seat in the Legislature here, I will not believe that you can allow the lurking agency of cash and ignorant Adventurers in political society, to displace the confidence reposed in me by you, and to which I am entitled by my past services for Nanaimo and the colony at large in the late House of Assembly.

I shall therefore do myself the honor of meeting you at Nanaimo, on Monday or Tuesday next, to claim the fulfillment of your promises, by re-constituting me the guardian of your interests in the approaching Parliament of this Colony.

I am, Gentlemen,
Obediently yours,
